Current Charges Due Date 09/17/2013

The billing summary shows all activity on your account since the last billing statement. Any amount listed in (Parenthesis) is a credit balance. The total amount due is the total amount of your billing. This includes any balances from your last billing, credits, payments received, returned checks, fees or any late charges you may have incurred.

The billing statement date, and current charges due date are listed below the billing summary. If you have a balance from last billing, the due date for a previous unpaid balance is listed in the messages box. PREVIOUS UNPAID BALANCES are considered delinquent amounts, the current charges due date is ONLY for the current charges listed in the billing summary section.

This chart helps you visualize any trends in your monthly energy usage. Compare this month to last month's usage and to the same month a year ago. Usage is displayed in a graph format.

If your account has a previous unpaid balance it is considered a delinquent amount, a statement will appear indicating the date by which we must receive your payment to avoid a late charge and possible interruption of your electric service. A delinquent amount has a different due date than the current charges due date listed below the billing summary. If your payment was received after the payment received date listed above, it will show up on your next billing statement.
